

Madder Than Before

music and lyrics by Rainer Escheberg i've been working hard all day my head felt like stuffed with hay and i only tried to get a piece of sleep

but that crazy little song didn't let me get along and it sentenced me to get back on my feet well, okay, now here I am but the muse did have no plan and she kissed me on my cheek and turned around and she walked right through the door left me standing here as poor as a man could be when he is feeling down

it kept on dragging me half way down the floor and it made me madder than before

no chance of escaping i just had to do what is bringing me here to you

in front of you all the chords were well set up but no single word would drop from my head down to my hands down to the sheet and it still stayed purely white it just kept me up all night and it nearly started then to make me weak then the muse turned back to me and she had that magic key that enabled me to start to write on time and she gave me all I need and then later on it seemed that she found a way to get me back on line

then came the moment that makes it count you will see what is just look around

all for that instance meant to be bound to the reactions shown around

and here we play
